KELPA Scores tell us that...

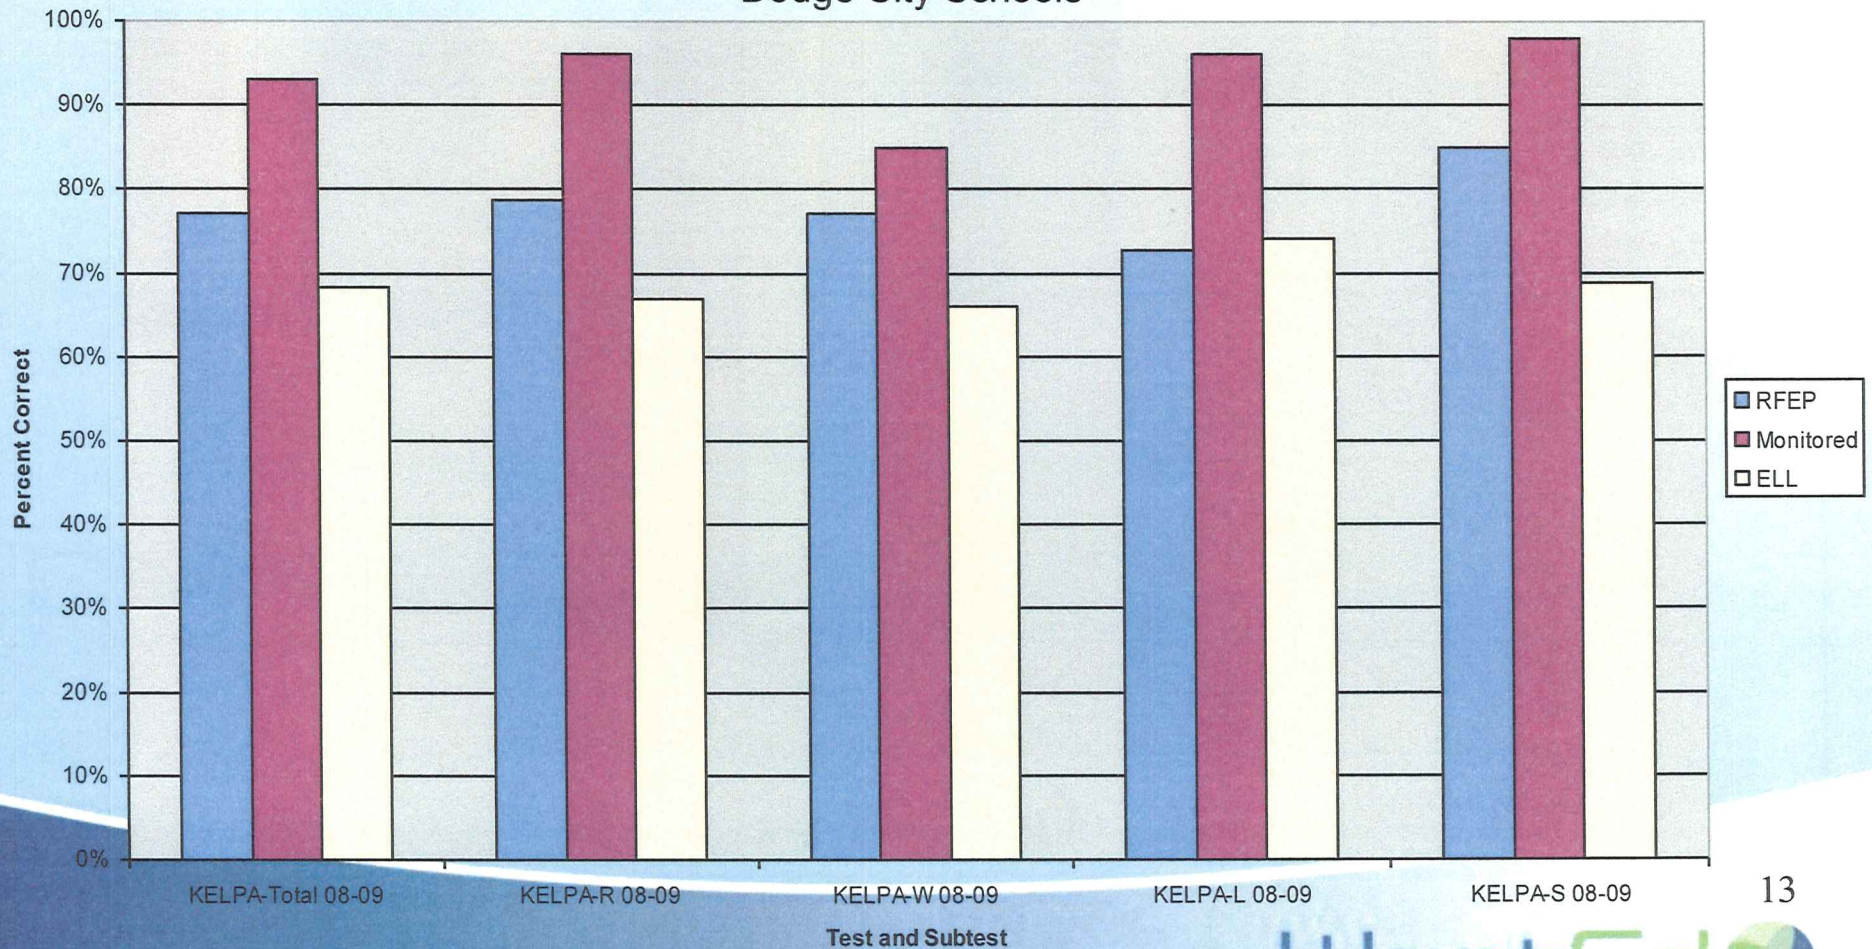

- Reading and Writing are the weakest skills.
- More students stay the same or regress in their performance levels on KELPA than progress.
- It appears that more students total scores (scale scores) go down on KELPA than go up.
- Do teachers have lists of these students?
Are they teaching to their language needs?

What is creating this pattern?

- Do students receive ELD until they are classified as “monitored ELL”?
- What type of ELD program do ELLs receive?
- In grades 10 –12
 - What is the drop out data by ethnicity and/or language proficiency?
 - Why are so many 12th graders reclassified when their KELPA scores are lower than the cut offs?
